

I am concerned about Net Neutrality. ISPs should not be permitted to filter or meter network traffic based on its content. These companies which provide internet service should be barred from affecting its content. The argument that 'the market will sort it out' is based on the faulty assumption that people are by-and-large free to choose their internet provider from a host of options. In many places (particularly rural places) there very few options. At my last two residences we could only choose Comcast for internet. In rural areas, the choices are even more restricted.
