

The Internet is essentially free speech at its most basic level. The slippery slope argument should be mentioned by someone, as it would be easy to infringe upon the civil rights of many US Citizens with a seemingly innocuous attempt to "protect" us. I believe the Constitution was quite clear about the issue of freedom of the press, the internet being the ultimate form of "the press" ever.

Aside from that, the last thing this country needs is the ability of a corrupt government to silence any opposition as china does to its so-called "dissidents" usually merely political activists. Think long and hard about who will use the ability to censor the American Public, and to what ends.

That is all.

Thanks Much~!
