

I believe it is absolutely imperative to uphold the concept of network neutrality with respect to the Internet. To do otherwise would discard everything that has made this great network a vibrant tool for research, communication, and commerce. Moreover, it is my opinion that the "balkanization" proposed by AT&T and others would ultimately impede free speech in the United States and around the world.

Regards,

Steve Gibson
Software Engineer
xsg@comcast.net