

Internet Neutrality is essential for the growth and prosperity of the U.S. economy in the foreseeable future. Creating a tiered system of internet usage will effectively disenfranchise a large segment of the population. The power of the internet lies in its ability to allow and in fact encourage the broadest input to the marketplace of ideas.

Without net neutrality we will lose a significant portion of this power, and the U.S. will effectively become less democratic.