

Destroying Net Neutrality threatens to destroy the last bastion of pure free speech remaining. The immediate effects of this aren't tragic, but over time they can be wedged more and more to damage our rights just as has been done with every other law in the past. Just look as to what has happened with the patriot act. Designed to make things better, but it was exploited and twisted to violate the rights of Americans. This is bigger and more important than even that, because it isn't just about the free speech of Americans, it is about the free speech of humans. Do NOT let money and greed control free speech. Allow the internet to remain free and democratic as it is. If ISPs want to charge more for the current level of service, that is fine. That is capitalism. But don't change the rules when the game isn't going your way.
