

I'm sure there are plenty of comments to read so I'll keep this brief. I am very much in favor of network neutrality. It is an environment of neutrality which gave birth to the Internet as we have it today and which has made possible the various technological innovations which provide the foundations of it. Perhaps more importantly, it is neutrality which has allowed the social impact of the Internet to be so great: that every user of the network can communicate freely and unhindered with other users.
