

Information for the next generation of thinkers.

I use the internet to search through a broad and varied body of information about alternative energy sources and energy conservation methods. Some of that information will surely be suppressed if the internet is not kept as open and free-form as it is today.

My former students used the internet to search for new ideas, alternative views, and new ways of thinking about many of today's important issues.

My children will learn that the internet is an accessible place to share ideas worldwide without filtration or censor. But only if we act now to protect this extremely important intellectual frontier.
