

Wheelchair User Must Conform To THEIR Desires?

Net Neutrality is essential to free speech, equal opportunity and economic innovation in America. Since the FCC removed this basic protection in 2005, the top executives of phone and cable companies have stated their intention to become the Internet's gatekeepers and to discriminate against Web sites that don't pay their added tolls. I own a website that I pay for that helps me to communicate with others outside the confines of my bed to which I am relegated since my disability. My disability income is not nearly enough to cover additional charges that my cable company would impose upon the already exorbitant fees which only allow me internet access two-thirds of the time due to the frequent outages of the service. Since the dissolution of the monopoly, constraints which make it impossible to obtain a different provider the rates are not competitive and the service is shoddy.

This fundamental change would end the open Internet as we know it. It would damage my ability to connect with others, share information and participate in our 21st century democracy and economy. The FCC must ensure that broadband providers do not block, interfere with or discriminate against any lawful Internet traffic based on its ownership, source or destination. Already, because of the quest of the almighty dollar and the worship of it, I have been called a liar and was cursed at when reporting problems with my service. Then when they finally repaired the problem which WAS on their end they FORCED me to go through their site and their site only for 11 hours. I did not have access to anything else.

To allow these changes to take place it would mean that each and every person would be put in the position of subservience to these companies. Are we regressing to the times of bourgeoisie and the proletariat? Is the consumer then to take on the characteristics of the lumpenproletariat? Is this what we are turning to? A country which is described so impassioned in a class war based on money as in the Communist Manifesto. This is where the entire problem lies within our GREAT COUNTRY...you remove GOD from this country upon which it was founded and every evil then walks in and lines pockets of those who are already evil. When that which is prepared and in place to fight evil is chastened and discarded then evil has a playground. There was NEVER an intention to divide GOD and STATE. From the very beginnings, the intent was to have a country where GOD was a freedom of right. Put that back and set the record right.

Do not allow the internet to be a forum for evil doings. Do not remove the internet from the Land of the Free. I voluntarily served the country to uphold freedom for this nation for 21 years and yet now I am not "Free", I may have to pay extra for information. What happened to the First Amendment? Are you also going to decide in a year or two that an air filter company now owns rights to charge extra for those who would like to breathe? This is downright wrong...bad decision...think again, protect the rights of the citizens not line the pockets of the monopolies or in a word that we all think but are too afraid to say.
