Dear FCC:

I have a favorite radio station with a weak signal. A year and a half ago, I found out I could listen to it on xm, so I signed up. Now I can listen all the time, in my car and at home. What's more, I have access to programming available nowhere else. My favorites on xm include Air America, The Village (folk music), Decades (especially 1940s music), Old-Time Radio (classic radio comedies and dramas), C-SPAN, and CNN. (I wish they had MSNBC.) Satellite radio competes with every other form of radio, in addition to all other media, including radio stations online. The FCC should not prevent the merger of xm with Sirius.

Sincerely,

Sondra Armer
