

If XM and Sirius merge, they should be required to potentially release half of their combined frequency allocation if a credible competitor arises.