

Keep internet away from giant telecom profiteers

The Internet must remain the democratic tool it has come to represent. The giant telecommunications companies whose bottom line is profits think of the Internet as their sole possession. A recent quote from one of their CEOs alludes to this attitude (people need to start paying to play on their pipes!) That attitude is not only outrageous, but dangerous for democracy. I urge you to keep the Internet neutral so that non-profit organizations can exist and compete fairly. Thank you very much.
