

Stand Up For The Common Person!

My faith in my government has been waning lately. It seems like every time I turn on the news I see a new story about how the common American citizen is being trampled on. Wire tapping, the jury system being mocked, etc, etc, etc.

The FCC deciding against Net Neutrality is the issue that I'm speaking out about, finally.

How can this decision be argued as anything other than bending over for big business? How will the consumer, the citizen possibly benefit from the internet being carved up between telecommunications companies?

Please support Net Neutrality!
