

Why I believe net neutrality is important:

The internet is the great equalizer. I'm currently developing a website with a friend, and if net neutrality is done away with, our cost of operation should our project be successful would be high. All that these telecoms and cable companies want to do is tax success, and increase their profit margin at the expense of those like me and others who want to bring services and products to the citizens of our nation.

It is the responsibility of the FCC to prevent this incursion into the taxation of interstate commerce by the establishment of tariffs on traffic loads on the internet backbone.
