

Intelligent thought requires Free Information

I research many topics, (how-to, artists' products, meditation practices, books, CDs, DVDs, loc.gov, etc.) and depend on the internet to give me access to information around the globe.

I also use it to find out about products that I am interested in purchasing; i.e. availability, performance, warranties, rate of repairs, etc.

I find it a convenient and speedy way to communicate to my loved ones. Without this neutral form of communication I would be seriously hampered in my ability to seek information that enhances my quality of life.
