

Net Neutrality

Net Neutrality is basic to the American ideal of free speech. It is something that I could never have imagined when I was growing up in the Mid-West over 50 years ago and is something that I marvel at each time I send a message to one of my friends and relatives. It is essential to communication among the citizens of the country as well as to the business community and needs to be preserved as it is. Each time I pass the television while my wife watches I almost cry when seeing what a money making, inane device it has become for the power hungry corporations who control it when it had so much promise when it came on the scene in the early 1950's. What a waste! Don't let that happen to the internet.
