

No one should control the Internet for profit

Network neutrality is essential for an informed public. An informed public is essential to democracy.

We have essentially lost the possibility of an informed public to corporate control of the media. We can not afford to lose network neutrality to corporate control of internet access

Corporate control of internet access for profit would kill one of the few semblances of democracy we have left.