

No gatekeepers for internet access.

I oppose any restriction on internet access.

This country does not need any gatekeeper to control the flow of information. I use the internet hourly every day to access financial and other information in my financial planning practice. Any impediment to free access to information would jeopardize my rights to exchange information as a citizen and as a financial professional, which will ultimately harm my clients. If access to information is dependent on the ability to pay or otherwise, this country will soon become the most ignorant country in the world!

Net Neutrality is essential to free speech, equal opportunity and economic innovation in America. Since the FCC removed this basic protection in 2005, the top executives of phone and cable companies have stated their intention to become the Internet's gatekeepers and to discriminate against Web sites that don't pay their added tolls.

This fundamental change would end the open Internet as we know it. It would damage my ability to connect with others, share information and participate in our 21st century democracy and economy. The FCC must ensure that broadband providers do not block, interfere with or discriminate against any lawful Internet traffic based on its ownership, source or destination.
