

Do not again sacrifice the public airwaves!

The internet, levelling the playing field (via net neutrality, that is) among all peoples of the wired world, is our only hope for person-to-person communication about making this a better world.

If you, FCC, allow corporate behemoths like AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, etc. control what you do with the People's airwaves, than you, FCC Commissioners, have nailed practically the last nail in the coffin of what was once the world's great hope: America. Now, should you ignore the will of the populace, you will become fascists in large part responsible for the corporate control of the Amerika in which your grandchildren and great-grandchildren shall live. And they might be better off living in China.
