

Preserve free internet access

Net Neutrality is essential to free speech, equal opportunity and economic innovation in America. Since the FCC removed this basic protection in 2005, the top executives of phone and cable companies have stated their intention to become the Internet's gatekeepers and to discriminate against Web sites that don't pay their added tolls.

This fundamental change would end the open Internet as we know it. Particularly since the print media is losing its primacy, more and more people are dependent on the internet for their source of information and that access needs to be unfettered.
