

Freewheeling Exchange of Ideas

With just a few corporations controlling all of the major print and broadcast media, the Internet is one of the last remaining avenues for free speech. If the founding fathers were alive today, they would applaud the open exchange of ideas available on the net. They believed in letting the public decide, and we should abide by that principle today.