

Don't Destroy Our Future

If we allow the internet to become a regulated medium, it will do nothing to improve what this country is founded upon: the free market. Let the internet function as a free medium for entrepreneurs to expand their own businesses, not for massive communications companies to increase their already excessive profits and restrict access at their own discretion. If it were to become a commodity, just as radio stations, newspapers, and television companies have been turned into, our freedom of speech will indirectly be stifled. Let the people have the internet to develop new businesses, new information systems, new ways of communicating. Please don't stop something just when it's starting to get to the good part. Who knows what could happen, maybe a free internet will eventually lead to world peace, you never know in this world.
