

Keep the net neutral

As a small business owner having a website has been essential to my business growth. The idea that I would have to pay additional fees to maintain my website, or that my site may not be able to be viewed with the same ease is of great concern to me and many business owners.

In addition, I'm not sure the large phone companies know what people want to see online. I'm often surprised and delighted to discover an obscure website I have never heard of before and that is maintained by one creative person with interesting views on culture, politics or religion. This type of equal platform is worth maintaining
