

Net neutrality is essential to competition

The internet was founded by the the people (not commercial entitites) on the basis of openness and cooperation. The fundamental original agreements guaranteed network neutrality and this is why the internet grew -- and it's fundamental value.

Please, demand that communications companies abide by these long standing rules. Don't let this small group of companies monopolize the internet and access to the internet.

Since the FCC removed this basic protection in 2005, the top executives of phone and cable companies have stated their intention to become the Internet's gatekeepers and to discriminate against Web sites that don't pay their added tolls.

I would remind you that your oblication is to regulate the internet for the public good and stand up against the few monopolies that want to steal this public resource.

Long ago our roads and highways were made public, and the internet has always been a public resources -- let's continue this trend.
