

Don't let ISPs artificially limit speed.

When I pay for internet access, the purveyor of that connectivity should not be able to artificially increase or decrease bandwidth to specific sites based on whether or not that site is big enough to pay my provider for that speed. A neutral internet is responsible for the tremendous growth of the online world-- keep it that way.