

The diversity of our nation's media system begins with a diversity of owners. Anything else is corporate fascist tyranny!

The majority of our country's media outlets are owned by a homogenous few – ignoring the voices of many and under-serving these same communities.

The lack of minority and female owners

Without a diversity of owners, the images and issues covered are often inaccurate, skewed and not reflective of the many voices that the outlet should be serving.

As you reconsider the current ownership limits, ones that consolidate the power of our media system into the hands of a few, know that these rules contribute to a lack of diversity and the stereotyped, one-sided, inaccurate and aloof coverage of minorities and the issues that effect thousands of communities nationwide.

You can help ensure a broader, more diverse field of owners by voting against media consolidation and supporting the inclusion of more minority and female owners into the media landscape.

True diversity starts with ownership. I urge you to support that diversity today.
