Dear FCC:

I love my XM radio, I'm a listener subscriber by way of an agreement that took place at America Online. I was a major influence in the agreement as this was my pitch for improving service with music.aol.com as a joint agreement between XM radio to increase it's listeners by providing exclusive listener content such as concerts known as AOL MUSIC LIVE. The public has the right on it's choice, sadly FM has lost touch with it's overuse of commercials and repeat programing. The only turn around from ClearChannel was to provide contest to when money listening around the clock for the hour to call. Now they use new tactics by way of sending text messages for contest that costs .99 to 1.99 per entry. It's time for change, allow XM & SIRRUS to join as one and you will see what the future can trully hold for us all.. Know it's time for me to work my magic, have you considered launching an FCC channel on the network as pitch? Why not, there are many that follow what the FCC tells them there are others that have opions that would like to be heard. This is the way to do it, pitch the idea as an exchange make a new channel available as an open medium for the public to be heard.

Sincerely,

John Hilla
