

Since when did the US become a dictatorship?

One would think that as time goes on, our use of technology would increase and we would make it part of daily life. Thus, it is disappointing to see such regression in the freedom of individuals surfing the internet. However, some people believe that restricting people's rights to view content on the internet is necessary or allowed. Such nonsense reminds me of dictatorships in third world countries where many websites are restricted and an open internet does not exist. Is this what the US has become, a third world dictatorship? I hope not.
