

information - stop the misuse , not the use information is like herpes ... no matter what u do to keep it away from u ... it always finds ways of getting to u. lol.

like everybody else i have seen and heard a lot about web censorship ... in most of the cases the excuse used to justify the actions of banning web content is that to prevent its mis-use little do we realize that internet just provides a way to access information in a easier way ... its not the only source though ... for a person who is determined enough to actually find something... web censorship will just be a minor hurdle ...

what we need to think of is ways to prevent the misuse of information ... allow the information to be used only for the benefit of society and not to undermine its peace and social balance. the fabric of social and economic disparity in todays society easily fuels one to think about others in a negative perspective ... its easy to assume that one would misuse any and all information if given the right motive ... but if there were measures in place to prevent that misuse then one wouldnt need to concern themselves with censorship we'll see a lot of this censorship till we find ways to prevent the mis-use of information available freely on the web. there is no smoke without fire ... things have wrong in the past and i guess we need to think more about this than just protest the censorship ...

"what u sow is what u reap" - RATM ... be responsible for your actions ... everything else will follow :)