

Where does it stop?

If we allow ISP's to start limiting our access to the internet, what guidelines will they have to abide by? None! Legally, these companies have free reign over the limitations of the service they provide where they should have stipulations that require them to provide access to the entire net. To allow these companies to limit our internet access is a crime.