

US Internet Innovation Gone for Corporate Greed

We already have some of the most expensive cell phone and Internet connection costs and usage fees among developed nations due to large stagnate fat and happy corporate executives who just sit on their butts and don't innovate.

How can we develop the next set of Internet applications and expanded content when we give away the free platform to do so to the same corporations that are putting the breaks on lowering costs and improving their services? My monthly cable bill is not going down and the gains in offerings is only minimal over the last few decades...HD TV with the signal dumbed down to save bandwidth. Please!

Now I'm going to need a special box to determine which web sites I have access to. Stop this insanity now!!
