

University Student IT-Networking

I am a Student of a University and my major is Information Technology - Networking. This is the Era where government tyranny to control it's people begins. This is also the time where the people with money and power will abuse those powers in order to feel "in-control" with those people and to satisfy bigger business. I can prove it. I love power and I love to control things such as internet connections and monitoring emails that people use everyday but does that make it right? I don't think so. If I were to monitor YOUR every move, listening to your personal phone calls, stalking you, and spying on you; would that make YOU uneasy? Exactly my point. Privacy vs PTB(powers that be) is the subject of controversy these days. Soldiers in Iraq are dying for Freedoms we don't even have. The "War on Terror" is more important than helping "Americans" in New Orleans. Guns are being "forcefully" taken away from "Americans" INSIDE their homes from people who "appear" to look like military but are contracted to private organizations. Everything we know and love is being "Micro-managed". If you're not Free to make the wrong decisions then you're not truly Free at all. Data-Mining, Buying and Selling Personal Information, Background Checking companies such as Acxiom and ChoicePoint and their Inaccurate data, and other controlling information companies buy and sell personal information everyday for "pocket profits" Destroys people's lives. Television is a "one-way" communication. The Internet is a "two-way" communication arena and should be a free and neutral place where everyone can co-exist in harmony as one entity. I say to you if YOU take away my Freedom from the Internet then I request that every Soldier be returned from Iraq that are dying on a needless basis because if you're going to take away my Freedom then you don't need American Soldiers in Iraq to defend a Freedom I don't even have.
