

ISP'S ARE NOT POLICE!

I teach Copyright Infringement as the last subject each year. Guess what? It works, if I can teach kids to use the internet correctly, why do I need to have an ISP police me around? If I'm going to abuse it, it is my responsibility, not yours. You're not protecting me from anything, you're just making me try to get around it? Anything wrong with that picture? In addition to the legitimate uses of BitTorrent etc... what's next? Corrupted tiers, poor service (already there) illegal downloading of web pages? You don't give bandwidth cap limits up front, you hide behind the face of benevolence, yet you lie lie lie... Free as in free speech, not free as in free beer. You can't blanket block the first amendment. I wonder if the ISP's can even remember the first 5??????????

Net Neutrality is essential to free speech, equal opportunity and economic innovation in America. Since the FCC removed this basic protection in 2005, the top executives of phone and cable companies have stated their intention to become the Internet's gatekeepers and to discriminate against Web sites that don't pay their added tolls.

This fundamental change would end the open Internet as we know it. It would damage my ability to connect with others, share information and participate in our 21st century democracy and economy. The FCC must ensure that broadband providers do not block, interfere with or discriminate against any lawful Internet traffic based on its ownership, source or destination.
