

The internet should be a competitive resource and not owned by corporate giants. The FCC must not corporatize the airways thereby providing a "rigged market" instead of a "free market".

The more open the internet the greater the possibilities for innovation, access, education, and general opportunity for citizens and residents of the USA.

It's wrong for the FCC to think that a duopoly by phone and cable companies is a good thing and that giving those entities our public airwaves is a good thing. Truly shameful and unAmerican.

Just like the important 3 points about real estate are location, the important 3 points about the internet are access!

The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets.

To restore America's leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

Sincerely!
