

I live in a community that is served by Openband. Unfortunatley I expected Openband to "bundle" their services and save me about 10% per year on my telcom (internet, phone, cable) costs. However, the current pricing is about $50/month higher than what I was paying when I had THREE different providers.

Without a regulation opening up competition, I am stuck paying what ever they choose to charge me for the next 65 years. Every year telcom costs go down, and every year since I have live in the community my costs have gone up. This is clearly NOT what I signed up for.
