

I completely support this petition. I have been the victim of wide bandwidth automatically controlled data transmissions, and have had my communications disrupted by them. There are data modes available that are efficient in their use of bandwidth and in transferring data, and development of modes that are even more efficient would be true progress, not modes that are inefficient and interfere with other communications. Modes such as Winlink have no place on the HF bands, and its users have commercially available alternatives.