Dear Mr. Martin,

As a rather large shareholder in the satellite radio company Sirius, I would like to relay to you a brief conversation that took place recently between my son and myself, on a recent visit to see my son in San Diego, who is a 24 year-old student at the University of San Diego.

I thought that this conversation would be of interest to you, as I know that you are seriously considering whether or not to approve the XM-Siruis Merger, which will be completed around the end of the year. I feel, as complicated of a decision that this is, it can be simplified based on the simple fact that this merger must take place in order for these companies to survive, and here is why in a nut shell.

My son picked me up to go to dinner at a local restaurant in San Diego, in his new Toyota FJ Cruiser and I noticed that he has a factory installed XM satellite radio in his new vehicle, but was listening to his 'Apple' ipod, which was plugged into the vehicle. When I asked him why he was not listening to his satellite radio, he simply stated that it was not currently activated. When I asked why, he stated that he preferred his ipod music because he had more than 1,000 songs recorded, that this was music that he knew he liked and preferred that music, over the spontaneous variety of music that is offered by satellite radio.

When I mentioned to him that isn't it pleasant and different to listen to music that is spontaneous, he indicated to me that he didn't like that and it was not worth paying a monthly fee, when he had all these thousands of songs to listen to, which didn't cost him anything, except the price he paid to purchase his ipod.

To me gentlemen, this says it all. That satellite radio faces serious competition from many areas, but especially these types of terrestrial entertainment choices in vehicles.

Thank you very much for taking the time to read this humble letter. I hope that you will take these ideas under serious consideration, when making your decision whether or not to approve this merger.

Most Sincerely,

MARCUS N KRONEMEYER
