

In your case against Comcast, I do not know if how they run their usenet news server is relevant, but every month once I reach 1 Gb of data transfer to their news server, I receive a message that I have reached my monthly limit, and cannot use the server further. This is not limiting usenet traffic per se, as I could potentially buy a subscription on another news server, but I have not done so partially because of reports that Comcast then throttles usenet traffic.
