Dear Federal Communications Commission,

I do not know the details of what Comcast did or didn't do, but if you allow the owners of the internet access and transmission devices to influence what is transmitted over their equipment in an effort to enhance profits you are doing the country a great disservice. The productivity and creativity which keep America ahead in the very competitive world depend on the free and unfettered exchange of information unskewed by the distortion of profit maximization in a group of industries which have consolidated well beyond true competitiveness.

The FCC should take immediate action to put an abrupt end to this harmful practice and prevent all internet providers from discriminating against the free flow of online information.

The Internet is a vital engine for economic growth, civic participation and free speech. We simply can't allow corporate gatekeepers to smother these democratic communications by discriminating against new technologies, secretly interfering with Internet traffic and stifling innovation.

Sincerely,

Thomas Reinhard

Dear Mr. Taylor,

Please do what you can to protect net neutrality. It's hard to match the lobbying budget of the big media companies. But this issue is critical--we need protection of the internet as a common carrier of 21st century commerce.

Please ask telecoms to honor their commitment to provide 45 MB/second service. We're lagging behind the world in internet service! America must not become obsolescent.

Excuse me for switching topics: Please also fight media consolidation of radio and television. We need local radio and tougher enforcement of the once requirement for programming to serve local interests.

Thank you.

Alan

Dear Federal Communications Commission,

I'm totally appalled by Comcast's blatant and deceptive blocking of peer-to-peer communications! This is the problem so many Americans have warned would occur without Net Neutrality protections!

The FCC must take immediate action to put an abrupt end to this harmful practice and prevent other Internet service providers from following Comcast's example and discriminating against the free flow of online information.

The Internet is a vital engine for economic growth, civic participation and free speech. We simply can't allow corporate gatekeepers to smother these democratic communications by discriminating against new technologies, secretly interfering with Internet traffic and stifling innovation.

Dear Federal Communications Commission,

Comcast's actions are a clear indication that we need Net Neutrality protections.

The FCC must take immediate action to prevent other Internet service providers from following Comcast's example and discriminating against the free flow of online information.

I rely on the use of the The Internet to educate our youth. We need a free internet because my students can stimulate economic growth and participate better in civic life with free speech guaranteed on the net. My students are much more inventive with technology than we can imagine and a free internet is best for all of us.

Say no to corporate gatekeepers. Don't let them discriminate against new technologies, and protect our Internet traffic.

Sincerely,

Dear Federal Communications Commission,

This issue is of great concern to me. As americans, we pride ourselves in being at the forefront of personal freedom and expression.

However, Comcast's blatant and deceptive blocking of peer-to-peer communications is exactly the problem millions of Americans have warned would occur without Net Neutrality protections.

I strongly encourage the FCC to take immediate action to put an abrupt end to this harmful practice and prevent other Internet service providers from following Comcast's example and discriminating against the free flow of online information.

The Internet is a vital engine for economic growth, civic participation and free speech. We simply can't allow corporate gatekeepers to smother these democratic communications by discriminating against new technologies, secretly interfering with Internet traffic and stifling innovation.

Thank you for your consideration of this important issue.

Sincerely,

Kevin J Martin

Dear Kevin Martin:

Frontiers and their exploration are a fundamental part of America and our culture, but they are quickly disappearing from our world, save one - the Internet. It symbolizes what is great about the spirit of the American entrepreneur, the same spirit that built this great country.

It is with great disbelief that I discovered the FCC is considering doing away with Net Neutrality, the very rule that allowed the growth and expansion of the Internet in the first place. From shopping to research, communication to organizing, the Internet allows individuals, businesses, churches, non-profits, schools, local governments to communicate within and outside their communities.

The Internet allows those dwelling in rural areas the opportunity to participate in a diverse community that they would otherwise not have access to. It is a vital part of business today.

Do not allow the greed of a few large communication companies to destroy what the American spirit has built for the betterment of all. Please support Net Neutrality - it's good for America. It's good for families, it's good for business.

Sincerely,

Melissa Keith
