

As a concerned citizen and as Comcast has recently taken over as the cable and internet provider in my area, I am highly concerned with the actions they are taking which treat all peer-to-peer traffic as if it were illegal. As you know, there are many legitimate uses for peer-to-peer traffic, from downloading software updates to entire Open Source operating systems. It also disturbs me greatly that the companies which we have given so much to in the form of tax incentives to access rights to our public land would use such a poor excuse such as peer-to-peer file sharing to cover up the fact that they will not invest the money into upgrading their systems as they promised to do, instead attempting to throttle legitimate traffic and attempt to pass off the need for more money as the reason that they won't upgrade their systems. Please take this into consideration while considering your decision to punish Comcast for it's legally questionable actions.
