

Comcast's blatant and deceptive blocking of peer-to-peer communications is exactly the problem millions of Americans have warned would occur without Net Neutrality protections.

The FCC must take serious and immediate action to put an abrupt end to this harmful practice and prevent other Internet service providers from following Comcast's example of discriminating against the free flow of online information.

The Internet is a vital engine for economic growth, civic participation and free speech. We simply can't allow corporate gatekeepers to smother these democratic communications by discriminating against new technologies, secretly interfering with Internet traffic and stifling innovation.

On a personal note, as a Comcast customer I find it unacceptable that I now have restrictions on my legal use of a service that I pay for. I do not have access at my home to alternative high-speed connections. DSL is not available in my area, and Verizon's FIOS service has not yet been implemented. So while Comcast may not hold a monopoly in the strictest legal sense, I have no other options and unless the FCC takes action on the consumers behalf, I have no realistic recourse.
