

I am strongly opposed to governmental intrusion in the area of broadband network management. The FCC should not regulate the delivery of broadband internet service. For years the computer industry has been one economic sector where performance has increased and prices generally tend to decrease or remain constant. Allow private internet service providers to provide their own internal regulation, if desired, to ensure "Quality of Service". This will give the consumer the greatest number of options due to forces of competitive advantage.