

Comcast's blatant and deceptive blocking of peer-to-peer communications is exactly the problem millions of Americans have warned would occur without Net Neutrality protections.

That they would also engage in blatant and deceptive blocking of the public-comment meeting by paying people to arrive 90 minutes early in order to fill up the hall and keep the public from attending, is a perfect example of what they do every day on the internet.

The FCC must take serious and immediate action to put an abrupt end to this harmful practice and prevent other Internet service providers from following Comcast's example of discriminating against the free flow of online information.

The Internet is a vital engine for economic growth, civic participation and free speech. It is the last place where people can still get real news and information that is not controlled by the propaganda machine. We simply can't allow corporate gatekeepers to smother these democratic communications by discriminating against new technologies, secretly interfering with Internet traffic and stifling innovation.
