

Respectfully, I am requesting that the FCC take action to prevent discriminatory practices against the free flow of online information.

The Internet is a vital engine for economic growth, civic participation and free speech.

Recently I was informed that the Comcast has blocked certain types of communication over the Internet.

This concerns me, as access to the Internet should not be restricted. Respectfully, I am opposed to any type of metered or "tiered" service.

Each person who uses the Internet should be responsible for violations of copyright law, if any. As well, I support abiding by the terms of copyright law. But, at the same time, telecommunications firms, like Comcast, should uphold the tenets of an accessible and unrestricted Internet.

Indeed, as more persons use the Internet to enroll and participate in such worthy endeavors as earning credits via the auspices of online universities and the like, unrestricted access to the Internet becomes not merely desirable; it becomes a necessity.

This is why I am requesting support for the terms of the Internet Freedom Preservation Act.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Charles R. St.James
