

I want to register my plea that the FCC support Net Neutrality. You know far better than I the consequences of permitting IPPs to influence (gatekeep) the flow of internet information. I will mourn the loss of free speech and input to official agencies such as yours. But I can't begin to imagine the consequences of net control on economics, science, global understanding, or public consensus.

Already, fear that the net is being controlled (thanks to folks like Comcast) influences user behavior (such as the time I'm probably wasting now).

Do the right thing about Net Neutrality or look very carefully at your motives for failing to do so. I'd find it hard to live with myself if I supported telecom control.
