

As a Comcast subscriber before and after their changing of service to limit what I could access online I can say first hand that it they hold no ones interest but their own. Trying to load large files to and from work were nearly impossible as Comcasts would constantly cut off my connection unfairly. The truth is that Comcast has no way of knowing if they are filtering good or bad content. If an individual is doing something wrong then punish the individual but don't limit the entire public to weed out a few bad apples.

Comcast's blatant and deceptive blocking of peer-to-peer communications is exactly the problem millions of Americans have warned would occur without Net Neutrality protections.

The FCC must take serious and immediate action to put an abrupt end to this harmful practice and prevent other Internet service providers from following Comcast's example of discriminating against the free flow of online information.

The Internet is a vital engine for economic growth, civic participation and free speech. We simply can't allow corporate gatekeepers to smother these democratic communications by discriminating against new technologies, secretly interfering with Internet traffic and stifling innovation.
