

It is just about that time when Big Corporations start to realize that they are not in charge. I believe that they have no right whatever so fill a room full of paid goons to attempt to block public dissent of their plan to control the internet. If we allow this to happen, then the last source of true democratic debate is doomed to allow for the already progressive fascist movement that elite corporate bubble heads have been pushing to become full fledged. I think everyone entering any kind of public forum should be made to swear that they have not received any form of payment in any manner or form in order to voice their concerns.

Comcast's blatant and deceptive blocking of peer-to-peer communications is exactly the problem millions of Americans have warned would occur without Net Neutrality protections.

The FCC must take serious and immediate action to put an abrupt end to this harmful practice and prevent other Internet service providers from following Comcast's example of discriminating against the free flow of online information.

The Internet is a vital engine for economic growth, civic participation and free speech. We simply can't allow corporate gatekeepers to smother these democratic communications by discriminating against new technologies, secretly interfering with Internet traffic and stifling innovation.
