

Don't let wireless carriers be the gatekeepers that decide who may use new, important mediums like text messaging; please keep speech free, no matter what form it comes in.

I pay wireless carrier, internet providers, package shipping companies, and the post office simply to provide a means by which for me to receive data. I never requested and do not want someone to "help" me figure out what I want to receive.

Should the electric utility deny me electricity if I use it watch a TV show they don't approve of? What about using the electricity to microwave some food they don't believe I should eat?

Note the name - wireless CARRIER. internet service PROVIDER.
