

I am sick and tired of the ongoing filings, notices and complaints by Georgetown Partners and supporters of the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB). In addition, the Department of Justice (DOJ) and FCC should be ashamed to allow this charade to continue. All interested parties have had their opportunity to make their concerns noted over the unheard amount of time of 13 months. In addition, shame on the DOJ and FCC for allowing a private entity firm, like Georgetown Partners, to argue that they have the rights to a business' products and business model. Consumers deserve a resolution to this fiasco as soon as possible.
