Dear FCC:

To Whom It May Concern:

As an avid satellite radio listener, I would gladly pay whatever price was needed to get both XM and Sirius on one radio. As a consumer, we should be able to listen to whatever we want. Combining these two companies would not create a monopoly because there are so many different options including free radio, free internet radio, ipods and cds. Moreover, with these two companies merged, a listener will be able to pay for a service that will allow them to hear all their sports and music they would need in one. It is a convenience and a privilege that any avid satellite radio listener will tell you is desired. It is with great conviction that I urge each and everyone of you to talk to consumers and realize that this is what consumers (the people who vote for you to represent them) want. For any further comments, I would love to be contacted. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

Chad Robinson
