

I am aware that Comcast is currently working with bittorrent to come to a resolution. I understand network management issues, however, the internet was designed as an open, unbiased network. If Comcast or any other company wants to create a network that is managed in any other way than this, then they are marketing a service based on an established precedent/definition of the internet. The services provided are substantially different than services expected. This is deceptive advertising and is bad for consumers.